Performance commentary

The fourth quarter of 2023 saw global equity markets stage a significant rally as the inflation data in the West continued to demonstrate a softening in prices and the Federal Reserve at their last meeting of 2023 discussed the potential for interest rate cuts in 2024. As a result, markets discounted material rate cuts and potentially a soft landing with the main beneficiaries being those sectors that had materially underperformed in the early part of the rate hiking cycle. For the quarter the FTSE All-Share rose by 3.2% and the more cyclical Mid 250 Index rose by 9.3%.

The Trust outperformed during the quarter and was positioned in 49th percentile compared to the peers. For 2023 the fund was ranked 36th percentile. The main drivers of performance included holdings such as 3i, Sage, SSE and LSE who all did well and delivered positive attribution. 3i has been a very strong performer over time, reflecting its ownership of the discount chain Action in Europe which continues to grow very strongly. The disappointments included, Rentokil, Standard Chartered and St James Place. Rentokil warned that organic growth would be slower than expected in the US and as a result the shares fell over 20%.

Fund activity

Investment activity was light reflecting our confidence in the majority of the portfolio. We continued to buy more Rolls Royce which was beneficial as their capital markets day in late October was well received. We also reduced the size of the position in British American Tobacco as it disappointed in its latest trading update.

Market commentary

Market overview

Economic attention over the quarter has been on inflation. At the start of the quarter investors focussed on the persistence of large price increases and central bank messaging on rates being held higher for longer. Yet, as headline inflation fell, sentiment swung dramatically towards the end of the quarter, pushing markets to price in interest rate cuts in 2024. The Federal Reserve (Fed), European Central Bank (ECB) and Bank of England (BoE) all left rates unchanged over the quarter, maintaining official rates at multi-year highs. The Fed has now held rates unchanged at its last three meetings. There has however been a significant shift in messaging, with the US central bank now indicating that it expects to cut rates by 0.75% in 2024. The ECB has similarly kept rates steady at its two most recent meetings, but central bankers in the eurozone said that no rate cuts have yet been discussed.

The quarter got off to a weak start as bond market worries and the events in the Middle East put downward pressure on the UK equity market. Markets then recovered in November as inflation data across Europe and the US continued to suggest that inflationary pressures were receding, and the month also saw a significant fall in the oil price. This prompted hopes of both an economic soft landing and that at some point central banks could pivot and start to reduce interest rates. Real estate and industrial sectors were strong, while energy, consumer staples and pharmaceuticals were relatively weak.

Equities then enjoyed a further run into the year end as inflation data remained benign, allowing central banks to make more dovish comments. Investors now see interest rate cuts in 2024 as being very likely. The oil price has remained subdued, but issues in the Middle East will need to be watched closely, as shipping is being diverted away from the Red Sea after attacks on vessels from militants in Yemen. These issues could undermine the improved inflation narrative if they lead to oil price spikes or supply chain disruptions and increased freight costs for companies.

The FTSE All-Share index therefore returned 3.2% over the quarter, with strong returns from small and mid-cap equities, with the FTSE 250 ex IT and FTSE Smaller Companies ex IT indices posting returns of 9.3% and 6.5% respectively.

The quarter saw a large amount of corporate reporting which was, on balance, reassuring. Corporate earnings updates were generally less bad than expected; while there were some notable profit warnings amid FTSE100 companies in October, in hindsight these appear to have been a case of getting bad news out early. By and large, the main results season in November was a story of operational resilience in a tricky environment and in many instances share prices rallied significantly on “in-line” statements, indicating that investors had been expecting worse.

Typically, this was due to effective cost control (higher margins) rather than due to improving sales, in part showing how many management teams have really got to grips with cost inflation. However, a number of early cycle industrial businesses did report sequentially improving order patterns in the months running up to December. These suggested that the significant inventory de-stocking cycle by industrial companies may be coming to an end, which would bode well for improving demand in the coming year.

Outlook

Inflation data has moderated in the quarter and raised hopes of cuts to interest rates in 2024 which should be supportive for equity markets.

The oil price has remained subdued, but issues in the Middle East will need to be watched closely, as shipping is being diverted away from the Red Sea after attacks on vessels from militants in Yemen. These issues could undermine the improved inflation narrative if they lead to oil price spikes or supply chain disruptions and increased freight costs for companies.

Despite the recent rally, the UK equity market remains out of favour. This has left many UK market valuations relatively depressed which is prompting many companies to buy back their own shares. It is also noteworthy that takeover activity has picked up again with a wide range of businesses being acquired by other industry players or private equity firms.

For our large and all-stock portfolios, we believe our approach of investing in a broad range of companies who are in control of their own fates, irrespective of market conditions, is the right one. As well as looking for durable businesses, we believe that a willingness to look through short-term extremes of sentiment and buy stocks when they are out of favour, or take profits when sentiment becomes exuberant should drive longer-term performance.

With small and mid cap strategies, Despite the market's obsession with forecasting short-term macroeconomic data over the recent past, our focus has always been on investing over the long term. We continue to seek out companies with the key fundamental SIMBA attributes (Scaleability, Innovation, strong Management teams, Barriers to entry and unique Assets) that will allow them to take market share and prosper throughout economic cycles. We continue to believe that it is these fundamental attributes that drive stock prices over the long term and we remain excited by the opportunities currently on offer.

Royal London Asset Management's Outlook 2024 document and podcasts are both available on our website. In this year's Outlook document, our fund managers assess the challenges and opportunities in their respective asset classes for 2024. With an environment of falling inflation and modest recession, the benefits or risk for equities or credit is not so clear cut and knowing your companies is key. We analyse the areas of concern and potential growth within this environment.

In our Outlook 2024 podcast, Piers Hillier, CIO, looks ahead to 2024 and discusses the issues he believes will be prominent over the next 12 months, and where the key investment risks and opportunities may lie.

Articles, videos and webinars explaining our investment thinking can be found in the Our Views section of www.rlam.com, including regular updates from our Fixed Income, Global Equity, Sustainable and Multi Asset teams.

Risks and Warnings

Investment Risk

The value of investments and any income from them may go down as well as up and is not guaranteed. Investors may not get back the amount invested.

Concentration risk

The price of Funds that invest in a reduced number of holdings, sectors, or geographical areas may be more heavily affected by events that influence the stockmarket and therefore more volatile.

EPM Techniques

The Fund may engage in EPM techniques including holdings of derivative instruments. Whilst intended to reduce risk, the use of these instruments may expose the Fund to increased price volatility.

Liquidity Risk

In difficult market conditions the value of certain fund investments may be difficult to value and harder to sell, or sell at a fair price, resulting in unpredictable falls in the value of your holding.

Counterparty Risk

The insolvency of any institutions providing services such as safekeeping of assets or acting as counterparty to derivatives or other instruments, may expose the Fund to financial loss.
